Richard Hawk exercises his artistic 'voice' through exquisite oil paintings on solid sheets of copper. The foundation of the image is first created through extraordinary oxidation effects on the metal according to his vision and design.

"Hawk has achieved something truly novel and his artwork will stand the test of time as being the first person to develop his technique, style and approach to a blank surface. There are art followers and leaders. Richard Hawk falls unquestionably into the latter," says Ryan Crowley of Crowley Art Investments, Los Angeles, California.

Hawk also paints in oil on canvas and water media on paper and is a noted instructor. His work explores themes of unity, duality, beauty, decay, and eternity. Partnering with nature in the creative process fosters this expression. Art is a language we use to describe dreams, the artist feels – the stuff of life which is beyond real.

Hawk's works hang in private and public collections around the world and appear in scores of exhibitions and galleries.
